

Hello!

My Hope

What a selfless act for you to make an adoptive decision. Your strength is a wonderful gift to me as an adoptive parent. Your decision provides me an opportunity to raise a family, to witness the growth and development of an individual and share in his or her life. I will consistently embrace this desire as a true and hopeful blessing while connecting with your child in a loving way. May you have an open-heart to entrust your child's care into my strong circle of love.

My Life / Family

Madison and Chandler are a very fun part of my life. They love to go to the park and play or grab a bone and chew on it until gone. It is awesome to have unconditional love and see their cheerful faces when I walk in the door.

I have a very supportive family. Even though we don't live in the same city, we are there for each other: during holidays, birthdays and special events that are important to each other.

My immediate family includes my Mother, two brothers, sister, sister in-law, two nephews, niece, three God-children, many Aunts, Uncles and Cousins, and many friends.

I have established an awesome home in Dallas. I love to redo houses and create a familiar, comfortable, 'home' feeling. My current home has many living areas including a game room and outdoor living with a pool where there can be many cook-outs and laughter while swimming and sharing in great conversation.

My Hobbies

I love to visit my family, play tennis, laugh, play with the dogs, fix up homes, watch movies, laugh, go to professional sporting events (hockey -- my favorite, football, and basketball), volunteer events (home and park cleanup), charity events (esp. Hope's Door, Brookhaven Children's Charity, Sterling Society's Childrens Charity, etc.), travel, photography, scrapbooking, play card games, laugh, board games, laugh some more, bowl, laugh even harder, cook, bake, hang out with friends, relax by the pool, work out, play piano and I stop to smell the roses an alot.

I appreciate you taking the time to consider me as part of your adoptive family.
