

Nicole and Kevin

Dear Birthmother,

We are Nicole and Kevin and we would like to thank you for taking the time to read our profile and for considering us as potential parents for the miracle you are carrying. We are extremely excited about the next chapter of our lives, parenthood, but we haven't been able to conceive. We eagerly look forward to opening our home to a baby who needs a loving forever family. We can't imagine how difficult this decision is for you. We can imagine, though, that the top priority is ensuring your baby is placed in the right home, and you can feel confident that we would provide a loving, safe, and joyous home environment. We believe that bringing your baby into our lives would be as much of a blessing as having one through our own natural birth. We would be honored to be selected as your baby's adoptive parents.

Kevin and I are both originally from Northern California, and after meeting at a Super Bowl party back in 2007, we quickly became good friends. We started dating the following year, and then got married in 2009. We have a common set of values and interests, and the most important things in our lives include our relationship with God, our marriage, our family, maintaining our good health, and our personal integrity. We love to laugh, have fun and enjoy life to the fullest. We just moved to Texas in mid-2012. We've found that our community has a very nice quality of life, warm weather, great schools and a safe environment in which to raise a family.

ABOUT US

Nicole is my hero. I have never met a woman who is better at balancing her loving, caring, and supportive nature, with the ambitious, positive, can-do side of her which has helped her to be so successful both inside and outside “the office.” She has always been my biggest supporter, and it was her idea for me to follow my passion for writing, which enabled me to complete my first novel. There is no doubt that any child would greatly benefit from all the love, guidance, and wisdom that Nicole would provide, and I look forward seeing the precious look on her face when she’s finally able to hold our new family member in her arms.

Kevin is my best friend, a wonderful husband and a true blessing. I know he will be an amazing father. He is super smart, warm, caring, energetic and strong. He has his priorities in line, is grounded, and has an extremely solid head on his shoulders. Kevin is the type of person who makes immediate friends because he is so comfortable to be around and people immediately warm up to him. I can't wait to see him be a father! I have seen him interact with his nephews over the years and he's loving, protective, disciplined, a patient teacher/coach and playful all at the same time. As our child grows up, Kevin will be an exemplary male role model – for our son to see what a balanced man looks like, or for our daughter to see the type of qualities to look for in a man when she one day starts dating.

Kevin and I both had stable upbringings with loving parents. Kevin's father passed away a few years ago, but he is very close to his mom, his sister (who is a few years younger) and nephews. Both of my parents are still alive and I have very close relationships with both of them. I have three siblings – a sister and two brothers. My sister and I are great friends. Growing up, we often spent time with my mom's sister and her family. In particular, I loved to play with her two girls (my cousins). We are still very close – they are like additional sisters to me - and we spend many of our holidays together. These get-togethers usually involve lots of outdoor activities like biking, tennis, playing Frisbee, soccer, or jumping rope, as we all bring out the "kid" in each other.

Both Kevin's and my parents came from humble beginnings and instilled in us similar values. They preached the importance of education, honesty, humility, appreciating what we have, caring for and about others, self-respect, and striving hard for what we want. They also told us throughout our childhood that we can do anything we put our mind to, which helped us to think big and pursue our dreams. We look forward to instilling these values in our children.

Family Forever

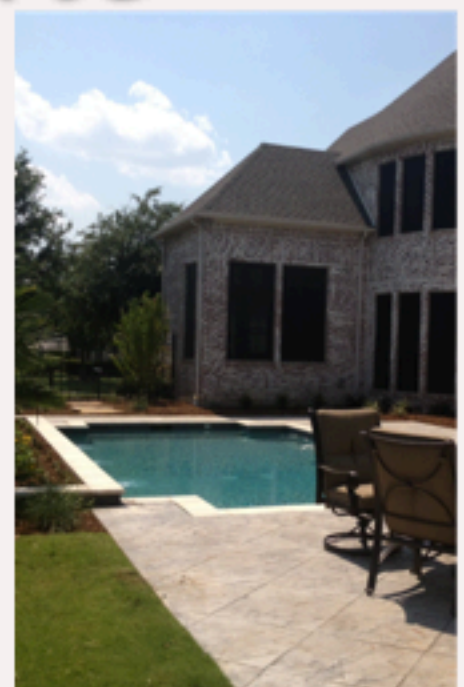

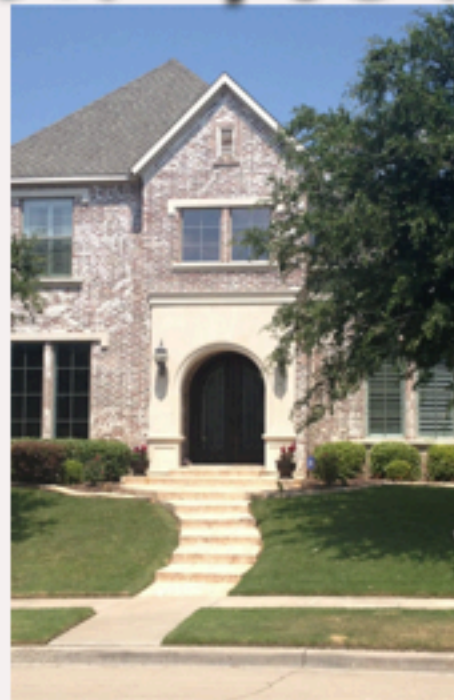

We love to travel

One of our favorite activities is traveling. In our four years of marriage, we have been blessed to travel to many countries, including Australia, Singapore, India, Dubai, France and Thailand. We have also visited many other countries together over the years, including Spain, England, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, The Caribbean and others.

Our Home

We moved into our new community (Plano, Texas) in November. It is a suburb just outside of Dallas with about 300,000 people. In October 2011, Forbes magazine named Plano the safest city to live in America with a population greater than 250,000, and Plano schools consistently rank among the highest in the nation. Though the majority of the population is White, it is ethnically diverse. We just elected our first Black mayor, which is a tribute to how progressive the city is. Our specific community within Plano is child-friendly with large lots of green, open spaces. Many parents take their young children on walks along the pond, which borders our home. We purchased a large house with the intent of filling it with a loving family. We have a beautiful, four-bedroom, five-bathroom house with over 4,300 square feet and a fun "movie room" with a theater-style projector. Our property sits on 2/3 of an acre, complete with a pool and a large grassy backyard where children can play.
